BOY, 14, CAUGHT AFTER ESCAPE; SENT TO GLEN MILLS

North Wales Boy is Found Along Delaware River Opposite Yardley

HAS CRIMINAL RECORD

Cut Lock Out of Door With Safety Razor Blade

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 17.—Although he is only fourteen, Wendell Bowers, of North Wales, has served time in Jamesburg, Egg Harbor Detention Home and Cape Charles, Va., and yesterday was committed to Glen Mills School, following a hearing before President Judge Hiram H. Keller in juvenile court.

Bowers, who says that he has an urge to join the Navy, escaped from the Bucks County Detention Home on Broad street, last Sunday afternoon while Miss Gertrude Bright, "probation officer, was preparing dinner.

He cut the wood around the lock on his door with a safety razor blade and used a coat hanger to pry out the lock frame. Bowers then ran to the rear of the second floor of the Detention Home intending to jump out a window. He saw someone below and darted for the front of the house, ran downstairs and escaped out a front door. He hitch-hiked to Mechanics Valley and then secured a "lift" to Trenton.

Bowers stole $5 in cash that belonged to Miss Bright and some jewelry.

The youth was arrested on the information of Raymond Kelly, of Morrisville, last Saturday, for stealing equipment from two boats anchored in the Delaware River at Morrisville. He is also wanted in North Wales for the theft of a bicycle.

After his arrest Bowers was taken before Justice of the Peace Neal Nolan, Morrisville, who sought to have him released in the custody of his parents, but the father and step-mother refused to have anything to do with him, because he could not be controlled. The father told Nolan that his son was continuously in trouble and had run away from home about a week ago. Bowers was then committed to the House of Detention in charge of Miss Bright.

After the youthful prisoner's escape police of Trenton and Morrisville were notified. Monday, Kelly, who swore out the original warrant, located Bowers lying along the bank of the Delaware River on the New Jersey side opposite Yardley. He turned him over to the police of Trenton District No. 2 and Miss Bright went to Trenton and brought the prisoner back to Doylestown.

"I just wanted to get out and get away," Bowers told Miss Bright. "I spent the six bucks for shoes and bought a traveling kit and some food. I wanted to get to the seacoast for I'd like to join the Navy."

DUE FOR SHOWDOWN TODAY

Harrisburg, Aug. 17.—Tax legislation was due for a show-down today in the most crucial test to confront Pennsylvania's assembly during the present extraordinary session. The fate of the session—and of unemployment relief—hung in the balance. The futility or success of the eight weeks of the session was to find its answer in the vote on the one per cent general sales tax scheduled as a special order of business on first passage in the House.

Political leaders for the most part declined to go on record with positive predictions in view of the many upsets in the assembly's plans, but were frank in their declaration that failure of the bill will doom the session, while its adoption in the lower branch will assure the legislation of a substantial measure of success. Strategic last-minute efforts to weld scattered groups, blocs and the irreconcilables in the House were made, but the general condition of disorganization left the outcome in doubt even into roll call time.

All other tax measures designed to finance the $12,000,000 Talbot Relief Bill waiting in Senate Committee for a revenue-raiser to sustain its existence in operation were shelved to give the sales tax bill an open track.

DEMAND IMMEDIATE TRIAL

Washington, D. C., Aug. 17.—Trial before the national election of the three veterans indicted here for assault on police during the "Bonus Riot" of July 28th, was demanded today by Jesse Duke, counsel for the veterans, although District Attorney Leo A. Dover said the veterans would be tried at the October term of the federal supreme court. Duke said that District officers would make efforts to delay the trials until after the election in November. Duke who was retained by the American Civil Liberties Union to defend the three men of the ill-fated B. E. F., declared he would fight the charges "all the way." The veterans, Bernard McCoy, John Olson, and Broadus Faulkner—all face the possibility of heavy prison sentences if they are convicted.

MOTHER TO FOLLOW SON

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 17.—An ambitious mother is fitting herself to follow in the footsteps of her youthful son, Mrs. Emelie Buck, of Westfield, N. J., was to begin solo flights today preparatory to taking a test for a pilot's license. Her son, Robert, 18, holder of many junior aviation records, recently shattered the best previous mark for flying time from Newark, N. J., to Mexico City.

RELEASE LIVE STOCK SEIZED AT MORRISVILLE

Creditor Decides He Only Wants Automobile and Seven Saddles

MEN ALSO RELEASED

The 17 broncos and the 12 steers seized at Morrisville yesterday morning on an attachment by a Mercer County Deputy Sheriff have all been released as have also the two cowboys who had been lodged in the Bucks County jail at Doylestown.

After the live-stock had been seized after being trailed from Trenton the creditor, who resides in Dover, N. J., told the under sheriff that he desired to attach only an automobile and seven saddles valued at $325.

Consequently orders for the release of the livestock, which for the past few days played an important role in the Wild West show held at Woodlawn Park, was issued. Two cowboys, held temporarily at Morrisville and later shifted to the Bucks County Jail at Doylestown, were ordered released. Originally they were charged with grand larceny after being overtaken with the animals in their care. The adjustment of the civil action resulted in the decision not to press the criminal charges. The pair identified themselves as Harvey Marvin, of Fort Worth, Texas, and Dallas Connelly, of San Antonio, Texas.

A bond for $650 was posted by "Candy" Hammer, owner of the equipment, which had been leased to Art Mix, under whose name the show had appeared. Hammer, a well-known fancy rider and bronco buster, who had appeared at the Trenton Fair on more than one occasion, secured Fred Margerum as security on his bond. The bond will permit the release of the auto and seven saddles.

Troubles began to brew for the Mix rodeo last Friday night when an attachment notice was served by deputies sent out by Sheriff Charles H. Reichert.

The legal hitch meant nothing to the livestock, whose appetite for hay and feed was unabated. So the rodeo promoters were sorely puzzled.

About 3 a. m., things began to happen. (Continued on Page 4)

Gordon Salmon and Ernest Von Starck, Jr. The scores were 7-9, 6-4, 6-2.

DEMAND REPAIR OF TROLLEY TRACKS NOW

Morrisville Threatens to Take Case to Public Service Commission

COUNCIL TAKES ACTION

MORRISVILLE, Aug. 17.—Notification will be sent to the Philadelphia, Bristol and Trenton Trolley Company that unless repairs are made to the tracks on North Pennsylvania avenue and at Bridge street and Pennsylvania avenue, Morrisville, the matter will be reported to the Public Service Commission of Pennsylvania.

The Morrisville Borough Council last night instructed the secretary to send such notice, pointing out that a number of requests for repairs had been made and that little or no attention was paid to them.

Councilman Braker of the water committee reported that one of the filter beds at the water works had been cleaned and supplied with new sand.

The council took up the subject of delinquent water rents and instructed the superintendent to give people in arrears 24 hours' notice to pay the bills or have their supply shut off.

The question of financing the erection of new water standpipes was referred to the finance committee, which will report at the next meeting, next Tuesday night, when bids will be received.

Announcement was made that the borough tax duplicate for 1932 showed a total of $58,209.39.

FRIED ICE CREAM?

(By "The Stroller")

Fried ice cream? Sure! Just like this:

Cut brick ice cream three-quarters of an inch thick; dip in egg batter and drop into very hot cooking oil. Remove at once and drain on tissue toweling a few seconds. Serve at once.

The batter is made this way: Beat three eggs until light; and three-quarters of a cup of milk, one half cup of flour and pinch of salt. Beat until very well mixed, being careful there are no lumps.

If it doesn't work, Mrs. Francis Mimmitch, 337 North Penn street, Allentown, might offer some more suggestions. That's her concoction and her family likes it, too.

CIRCUS ARRIVES HERE; STREET PARADE AT NOON

Tented City Pitched On Sullivan's Field, South Bristol

TO GIVE TWO SHOWS

Today is circus day in Bristol.

And well do the youthful members of our population know it.

The boys and girls worked feverishly all day yesterday and early this morning finishing their daily chores at home, so that they might be free to mill about the circus grounds located at Sullivan's field, South Bristol.

When the caravan of motor trucks chugged through this section this morning, it was the signal for a general exodus on the part of the boys and girls. There were also noticed a sprinkling of older folks, as well.

A street parade was held at noon, today.

The time honored, yet magical, question, "Are you going to the circus?" was asked on every hand. Children from the surrounding community began a general trek to the circus grounds and viewed with interest the activities taking place there.

Two performances will be given today, one at two this afternoon and another at eight this evening with doors open one hour earlier. The small boy and girl are correspondingly happy and it goes without saying that their elders have the day marked on their calendar too.

This season the spread of canvas covers an area of about four acres and when erected the big tent alone affords comfortable seats for 5,000 people. Overlapping three rings, two elevated stages, and vast hippodrome track is a veritable maze of rings, ropes and apparatus, upon which countless queens and kings of the air twice daily defy death in entertaining the thousands of patrons.

Over 300 men, children and educated animals are employed in the presentation of the astounding programme, from the first to the last number. Act follows act in rapid succession and with such precision and skill as only can be found with Barnet Bros. Circus.

Throughout the performance as many as fifteen separate acts are simultaneously presented on the ground or in the air, and one is kept right busy watching the myriad of wonders.

While not enjoying the best of health recently Mr. Stover had continued with his work and went to his office Friday as usual. During the morning he told his wife who was with him at the office that he was not feeling well. He went to his home and upon failure to return after two hours an employee was sent to the house and found Mr. Stover dead. He was 49 years of age and made his home here for many years, being employed with the T. L. Leedom Company.

The survivors are his wife and mother.

Known by Spiritual Teachings Throughout Entire World

Young Hindu is Heard by Thousands in Holland Each Summer

EDDINGTON, Aug. 17.—The only opportunity to be afforded for people to hear Krishnamurti in the Middle Atlantic States will be given here daily from Friday, September 2nd, to Sunday, September 11th, inclusive.

Jiddu Krishnamurti, whose spiritual teachings have made him known throughout the world, will deliver lectures at "Sarobia," the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Logan, here, each of the scheduled days at 11 a. m., with exception of Saturdays, Sundays and Labor Day, when he will speak at four p. m.

The young native of India, who was educated in Europe, is making a tour of the United States and Canada as a spiritual teacher who desires "to help all men to attain the supreme and lasting happiness which he has found within himself." The young man's philosophy of life is original and interesting, and in close harmony with modern thought and conditions.

The talks by Mr. Krishnamurti will be given in the natural amphitheatre of pine trees of "Sarobia," with the Turnemende Country Club dance hall being used in case of rain. Many registrations are expected to be received for the camp, those from a distance being accommodated at "Sarobia" for the entire time if desired. They will find comfortable quarters in the new log cabins erected purposely for the Krishnamurti Camp, or in the dormitories. Arrangements are being made to have special buses make trips direct to the Logan Estate September 3rd, 4th and 5th, 10th and 11th.

Krishnamurti's philosophy of life is original and interesting and in close harmony with modern thought and with conditions in the twentieth century. He holds that an organization for spiritual purposes will eventually become a barrier in the individual search for Truth, and creates distinctions which lead to spiritual domination and exclusiveness. Krishnamurti himself thus declares his beliefs:

"I have no desire to found a new religion. I have already repeatedly declared that I have no disciples and wish none; for I hold that spiritual growth is entirely an individual matter and cannot be achieved by any external means, whether by the blind following of a Teacher, however enlightened, or by organized religious practice and ceremonial. I particularly repudiate all authority in spiritual teachings into esoteric grades reserved for the few."

This young Hindu was born in the town of Madanapalle in the Presidency of Madras, India. His family name is Jiddu, but according to the custom in South India among the Brahmins he is known by his personal name and not by that of his family. He is called Krishnamurti after a custom in South India that the eighth child, if a boy, should be named in honor of Shri Krishna, a Divine incarnation, who was an eighth child.

The father of Krishnamurti, Jiddu Naraniiah, was employed in the Revenue Department of the British Government. Krishnamurti's mother died when he was a little boy and when his father retired from the government service, Dr. Annie Besant, the President of the Theosophical Society of which Mr. Naraniiah was a member, invited him to work at the Society's headquarters at Adyar, Madras, and he settled there with his four sons.

In 1905, soon after Mr. Naraniiah went to Adyar, Krishnamurti and a younger son, Nityanada, came to the notice of Dr. Besant. She believed that she recognized in Krishnamurti latent faculties which she thought would make a great teacher, provided these faculties were properly developed. She offered to give Krishnamurti an education necessary for his high mission and his father, a poor man, gladly accepted the offer and gave his son into the Theosophical leader's care. As there was a strong bond between Krishnamurti and Nityanada, the younger boy also became a ward to Dr. Besant.

In 1911 Dr. Besant took the boy with her to Europe and announced publicly the nature of the spiritual greatness she was certain was latent in Krishnamurti. Thousands all over the world accepted her proclamation and banded themselves together in an organization called "The Order of the Star in the East." This Society was created to prepare the way for Krishnamurti in the work which he was expected to do when he reached manhood.

In 1922, after having been privately educated in England, Krishnamurti went to California where it was hoped the climate would benefit his brother's failing health. During the two years which followed he was preparing himself for his future work. Nityanada's death occurred in 1925 and the great sorrow which this brought to Krishnamurti proved the turning point in his (Continued on Page 4)

GOVERNMENT IN BUSINESS

Perhaps for the reason that its multifarious investigating committees had left no other worlds to expose, that gargantuan bureaucracy in Washington is now in the act of investigating itself. The Shannon committee of the house for the investigation of government competition with private enterprise is holding up a microscopic mirror to this octopus.

The inquiry has started the hounds of public protest in full cry upon the heels of bureaucratic government. Farmers are denouncing the Federal Farm Board. Engineers complain because they support the government but the government doesn't support them. Cleaners and dyers pay taxes to a government that competes with them through a prison cleaning and dyeing plant. Physicians object because the government is treating veterans for diseases of non-service origin. At Lawton, Okla., the merchants are up in arms because the government operates a department store for the garrison of Fort Sill.

Before the committee started its hearings briefs were on file alleging more than a hundred lines in which the Federal bureaucracy has invaded trade, industry and commerce. And all these lines are forced to contribute to the overhead of this competitor.

This may become one of the major issues in the next session of congress, but most people take the view of Congressman Shannon that once a government bureau becomes entrenched it is almost impossible to dislodge it.

WOMEN IN THE OLYMPICS

Within the last score of years it was considered unladylike and masculine for young women to participate in any sport more strenuous than croquet and tennis. And if a young woman had appeared in running pants or the typical bathing suit of today she would have brought the law down upon her. It was an attitude as old as the ages, for the women of Ancient Greece were not only barred from competition in the Olympic Games, but were not even permitted to witness those historic contests. And it was not until the Amsterdam Olympics in 1928 that the modern Olympiad was thrown open to the weaker sex.

Now look at the ladies. They have come from many lands to compete in a great variety of sports and to break records as rapidly and decisively as their male teammates.

Girl athletes have set new records at Los Angeles for such strenuous events as the javelin throw, the discus throw, the high jump, the 100-meter dash and the 80-meter dash. And their records are a credit to their sex.

The war did more than anything else to remove this double standard of sports. Perhaps sports for women derived its greatest impetus from the post-war agitation for physical preparedness by both sexes for the next world conflict. It originated with the excessively nationalistic little republics created in Europe by the Versailles treaty. But the girl athletes are playing in the 1932 Olympic games demonstrates conclusively that they are not product of a mere fad.

"MURDER of the NIGHT CLUB LADY"

THE NEW THATCHER COLT DETECTIVE MYSTERY

BY ANTHONY ABBOT

SYNOPSIS

Lola Carewe, "The Night Club Lady," and her guest, Christine Quires, are mysteriously murdered in the former's apartment. Scorpions were the instruments of death. The police suspect Guy Everett, the last person to see Christine alive. Lola had blackmailed Everett. He, however, claims that Christine discovered a plot to kill Lola and feared for her own life because of her knowledge. Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt learns that a young Paris bank clerk, named Basil Boucher, loved Lola. After robbing a bank to buy her a ruby, Basil disappeared. His parents sold medical laboratory specimens. Mrs. Carewe, Lola's mother, became hysterical at the mention of Basil, calling her daughter a beast and saying Lola never loved him. Edgar Quires, Christine's brother, left his Rochester home for New York following the receipt of a telegram the day of the murders. Christine was to have inherited wealth shortly. Suspicion also points to Dr. Hugh Baldwin when it is disclosed that he purchased scorpions. He had stated heart failure caused the deaths. Colt, calling to question Baldwin, finds him dead.

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

THE moment we were alone Colt his finger on the dead man's brought me to the body and put throat.

"There, Tony," he pointed out, "is the deadly kiss of the Durango."

And there indeed it was, a tiny red vein, crimson over the jugular vein.

"And here," added Thatcher Colt, bending beside the sprawled figure, "is the messenger of death!"

He picked up the dead insect between his fingers—its long feelers waved as my expelled breath passed over them. In silence, Colt put the Mexican scorpion into an envelope, sealed and marked it and gave it into my keeping.

"Our work is cut out for us," continued the Commissioner, "but before I notify Flynn and the rest, I want to do some private sleuthing and ask a few questions without interruption. Has Mrs. Baldwin regained consciousness?"

I found the pudgy little widow sitting up on the edge of the easy-chair in the front office, staring out blankly, while Miss Simon talked to her soothingly and rubbed her head with some aromatic fluid.

As always, in such investigations, my instincts revolted against the work we now had to do. This poor woman should be surrounded with sympathy and understanding, strict privacy and loving ministrations. But that was impossible. In her own way, she too was a victim—

—as in life, who is not? She would want to be alone but instead she would have to face the police. Even in these first few moments of shock and terror and numbing surprise, the widow of Doctor Baldwin must answer Thatcher Colt's questions, must allow the uttermost intimacies of her married life to be invaded, pried into, dangled before her, to be identified, analyzed and explained away. To Colt, as to me, this is and will always be the most distasteful feature of police work. But there is no escape. Here as everywhere else the quest of truth does not lie down a pleasant path.

Thatcher Colt stood before Mrs. Hugh Baldwin and spoke to her kindly, explaining the necessity for questioning her. But she put the Commissioner immediately at ease. In a low voice and with her round blue eyes fixed upon him clearly, she said:

"I know that Hugh has died suddenly and I know that he was called in last night upstairs, so I am not surprised to find you here and I am ready to answer your questions."

It seemed a brave speech, a courageous attitude, and Colt said as much as he drew up a chair, sat

"I knew perfectly well that Doctor Baldwin had been involved with Lola Carewe and that she was an evil influence in his life," said Mrs. Baldwin.

down and faced her, while I drew out notebook and pencil.

"Did your husband return home last night, Mrs. Baldwin?"

"No, but he telephoned."

"About what time?"

"It was after four o'clock."

"Will you tell me what he said?"

"It was a strange conversation, Mr. Colt. I suppose there is no use pretending that Hugh and I were happy together. We weren't. We hadn't been for a long, long time. It was my fault, too, I guess. When we were married, I was not like I am today. I had the figure of a little girl. I didn't take care of myself and I just grew to be like I am now. So I couldn't blame Hugh for—well—for looking at other people now and then. I tried to understand. He had never asked me for a divorce. And he was always gentle—but brooding and miserable. If he had asked, I would have given him his freedom, even though I loved him more, much more, than when we were married. I would have done anything for Hugh."

"Last night I stayed home with the children. We had a little New Year's party just among ourselves. We didn't know where Hugh was. The children were all in bed around one o'clock and so was I but I couldn't get to sleep. I know that it was after four o'clock when the telephone rang, and I was so glad too when I heard Hugh's voice. He said he was at the office, that he had come to a decision about our affairs and that he was going over a lot of business matters and that I would hear from him early in the day. It had been a long time, Mr. Colt, since Hugh talked to me like that. His voice was tender. He told me he had missed me. He said he wished things could be as they used to be. And he told me that no matter what he had done he had never stopped loving me. And then he hung up."

For a moment there was silence. . . . Mrs. Baldwin had not mentioned her visitor of the night before—the mysterious caller of whom we had been told. But Colt held this back.

"Why did you come here this morning?" he asked.

"I had just read the papers," Mrs. Baldwin explained. "I knew perfectly well that Doctor Baldwin had been involved with Lola Carewe, as she called herself, and I knew that she was an evil influence in his life. Some of the papers published some very unpleasant insinuations."

Colt glanced at me. So Dougherty was up to his old tricks again! "I tried to get Hugh on the telephone," Mrs. Baldwin went on, "but Miss Simon explained that he had gone out."

Here Miss Simon interrupted: "The doctor went out shortly after I arrived this morning, Mr. Colt, and soon after he was gone Mrs. Baldwin telephoned. When he came back I told him that Mrs. Baldwin was on her way to the office. He looked at me without replying, then went into the private office, closing the door. I didn't know that he had locked it."

"And that is all you can tell me, Miss Simon?" asked Colt.

"That's all I know, sir."

Colt turned to me. "Get Marshall over here. He's working across the street in a door man's uniform."

As I hurried out, Colt was resuming his examination, getting the factual data about Doctor Baldwin. By the time I had returned with Detective Marshall in his ornamental uniform of blue and gold, Colt had a sheaf of notes beside him, which he turned over to me. While Marshall and I waited, he continued:

"Under the circumstances, Mrs. Baldwin, it will be necessary to delay the plans for the funeral until the police have completed their investigation. I would suggest that you return home now. Have you relatives in the city?"

The stout little lady stood up and dabbed at her eyes with a handkerchief, three inches square, the perfume of which filled the room.

"Only my children," she answered. "We have two boys and a girl. They will have to be told."

She extended a plump little hand. "You've tried to be very kind to me. Thank you, Mr. Colt."

"Mayn't I go home with her?" entreated Miss Simon, impulsively. But Mrs. Baldwin straightened her hat, insisting:

"No, thank you, my dear. I think I would rather be alone."

"sailors" on the other side of the herring pond have made their appearance on the smart boulevards and at all the fashionable French resorts. They are startling in shade, mauve, wine-red, Nile-green, violet-blue and purple heliotrope being among the most popular tints.

Even straws come in a lovely lavender shade which Grandmother would like and match the tie, shirt and often socks as well.

Shantung silk shirts, beige-colored Oxford bags and hats dyed to that delicate shade which is the mark of well-baked pastry, be it French or any other nationality make another new color combination.

Leinen Puch, one of Paris' most fashionable outfitters, is showing a crepe de chine tie of Bordeaux-red, with chapeau and socks to match, the shirt coming in a paler tone. This promises to be one of the most popular tones for winter.

BENSALEM ACES MEET A 3 TO 0 DEFEAT MONDAY

BENSALEM TOWNSHIP, Aug. 17.—Bensalem Aces went down to defeat before Echo Beach Pansies, Monday evening. Ashton started in the box for the Aces and lasted two innings, allowing the Pansies three runs. John Torpey took up the mound work for the Aces in the third frame and was nipped for only one hit in three stanzas while the opponents were held scoreless and fanned seven times. Torpey was in fine form and there is a probability that the Pansies would not have scored had he started the game.

The Aces were confused in their batting order and this mistake cost them the game. Two runs were across the plate with one man out when it was learned that two men had batted out of turn. This put the side out and automatically discredited the two runs scored. The final score was 3 to 0, favor Echo Beach Pansies.

HULMEVILLE, Aug. 17.—The Hibernians, leaders of the second half of the Lower Bucks County League, and Hulmeville A. A. battled to a scoreless deadlock here last night in a pitching duel between "Eddie" Sullivan, of the "Hibs" and Howard Black, of the local club.

It was the third straight shut-out game hurled by the Hibernians' hurler who in his last appearance here blanked the resident club without a run or hit. It marked the scoreless inning record of Sullivan to twenty-one and in a total of thirty-one innings only two runs have been scored against him.

Blackie was in fine form last night and kept his fast ball speeding by the Hibernians' hitters at all times. In the six innings pitched, Black was found for but two bingles and only once did a visitor reach as far as third base. Eleven of the league-leaders fell down on strikes and not one got to first base as a gift, although two got there on errors.

Sullivan was a trifle wild last night but steadiness on the part of his receiving mate, Lycak, kept the hurler from going into complete wildness. Sullivan was in danger of being scored upon in several innings but always bore down in the danger spots and kept the homesters from the plate.

Hulmeville passed up a fine opportunity to score in the fourth. Comly, first hitter up, doubled to left center. Mende singled to right, Comly stopping at third. Black rolled to Dugan who in football manner dove at Comly who made an attempt to run home and then go back to third. Dugan got his man but was injured on the play. However, he remained in the game. Afterbach drew a pass and the sacks were loaded. Sullivan then put on the speed and fanned both Haefner and Kohler in the pinch.

Dugan doubled in the first for the Hibernians and continued to second on Kohler's error but Roe fanned for the third out.

Roe doubled in the fourth but could not get any further than the keystone sack.

Hulmeville again had a chance to score in the fifth. Schoenfeld singled to left. Rockhill singled to right but Schoenfeld went too far off second and was out. Ennis to Dougherty, a fine play. Foster whiffed. Comly lifted an easy fly to Ennis who disappointed the Hibernians' rooters by dropping the horsehide. Rockhill stopping at third. Mende lined to Connors, ending the frame.

Dougherty reached first on Black's error in the fifth but could not advance. In the lower half, Hulmeville could not come through in the pinch and lost a chance to win the decision. Ennis again gave Hulmeville a break when he missed Black's fly. Black went to second on a passed ball. Afterbach struck out. Kohler rolled out. Sullivan to Roe and Haefner fanned.

TULLYTOWN, Aug. 17.—The Paterson Parchment Paper Company's ball nine continued their hold on third place in the Lower Bucks County League, whitewashing the Bristol A. A. team here last night, 5-0.

Krishnamurti To Be At Eddington Sept. 2nd to 11th

spiritual life, about this great grief he has written:
"When my brother died the experience it brought me was great; not only the sorrow (sorrow is momentary and passes away) but the joy of experience remains. If you understand life rightly, then death becomes an experience out of which you can build your house of perfection, your home of delight."

He has also written this: "I suffered but I set about to free myself from everything that bound me till in the end I became united with the Beloved; I entered into the sea of liberation and established that liberation within me." From that moment Krishnamurti came before the world of his own accord as a spiritual teacher, who desired to help all men to attain the supreme and lasting happiness which he has found within himself.

When he ultimately came to the belief that any organization for spiritual purposes was detrimental to the accomplishment of those purposes, he dissolved his own "Order of the Star in the East" which in the course of years had grown into an international movement with branches in almost every country of the world and a large and influential membership.

This was in 1929.

During the past seven years Krishnamurti's activities have had an interesting feature in camp gatherings. Each summer between two thousand and three thousand people of all nationalities spend a week in tents near Ommen, Holland, where permanent arrangements have been made to make camp life convenient. Camps on similar lines are also held in California and in India and provide a unique opportunity for a large number of people to meet Krishnamurti personally and come in touch with his ideas.

ONE of the most notable features of the current baseball campaign has been the terrific batting of Jimmy Foxx, right-handed slugger of the Philadelphia Athletics. "Double-X Jimmy" has succeeded Al Simmons as the idol of Philadelphia fans, who are also touting him as Babe Ruth's legitimate successor as King of Sluggers. It is highly questionable that Foxx can hit a ball as hard as the fearless Babe at his best, but baseball men in general concede that Philadelphia James is the hardest-hitting right-handed batsman of all time.

Foxx came to the Athletics just about the time when Babe Ruth was at his peak. At that time no one dared predict that there was a player in sight who would ever approach the master mauler in homerun hitting. One veteran Philadelphia critic said rather guardedly at the time that Foxx had the power to hit like Ruth, and if ever a player came along to equal Ruth's mark it would be Foxx. Today it seems certain that Jimmy will eventually break the Babe's record, if not this year then in the near future.

The Philadelphia flier has a massive pair of shoulders and he swings in the true slugger style. Oddly enough, the man who first discovered Foxx was none other than Frank Baker, the first home-run king. Baker won the homer crown four times in a row from 1911 to 1914, his highest mark being 12 four-ply blows in 1913. Babe Ruth, who inaugurated the modern era of home-run slugging, broke all previous records when he smacked out 25 homers in 1919. From that time on the name Ruth became synonymous with home-run hitting, and the Bambino proceeded to make himself a secure place as the greatest slugger the world has ever seen. A good many years have passed since Ruth first ascended the four-base throne, and the Babe is now close to the end of the trail. Ruth has flashed some marvelous slugging this year, in spite of his advanced age and several unfortunate injuries, but he himself has said that he will retire from regular play after a year or two more. The Babe is 35 now and this is his 19th year of active baseball service.

And although neither Foxx nor anyone else can ever fill the Babe's shoes when he steps down, Philadelphia Jimmy looks like the near approach to a second Ruth that we'll see for a long time.
